FURIOUS GALES HINDER RESCUE SHIPS ON COAST

Red Cross Liner "Rosalind"
Drifting Helplessly;
100 Aboard

SEVERAL SHIPS ANSWER

Port Authorities Fear Disabled
Vessel May Near Sand Bars

HALIFAX, N. S., Mar. 6.—(INS)—Furious gales lashing the North Atlantic handicapped rescue ships which today attempted to reach the Furness-Red Cross liner Rosalind, drifting helplessly with 100 persons aboard between Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island after losing her propeller in fighting against headwinds.

Several ships plying the vicinity were approaching the tossing vessel, but high seas rendered the problem of rescuing those aboard extremely hazardous. Rain and snow added to the violence of the storm during the night.

The Rosalind, under command of Captain Reginald Kean, was enroute from St. Johns to New York when overtaken by the storm which has swept the North Atlantic and devastated the east coast. Intermittent messages received from here yesterday said the ship was in no immediate danger, but as night came on fears increased for the safety of those aboard. There are 33 passengers in addition to the officers and crew.

Port authorities watched anxiously for reports on the disabled steamer, fearing she might drift toward the treacherous sand bars which girdle the island. They are known as the "graveyard of the Atlantic," and running around there would mean disaster.

The Dutch tug Rhodde Zee started out from here last night with orders to take the Rosalind in tow and bring her back. Another tug set out from St. Johns, N. F., and the Furness liner Newfoundland, from Halifax to Liverpool, changed course on receipt of an SOS from the Rosalind and sped toward her.

The storm severely buffeted also a number of other vessels. It was reported here that the Roger C. Sullivan, of New York, sank in the fast seas off Hen and Chickens Lightship, outside Woods Hole, Mass. The crew of 12 was rescued. Steamers cruising in the vicinity of the West Indies stated that the worst weather in years was encountered beginning Tuesday. Tides in this section mounted higher than any water level recorded in the last 25 years.

A check-up on the passenger list of the Rosalind indicated that among those on board are Sir John Crosbie, former minister of finance; C. A. Bruce of the Canada Life Insurance Company; Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Bally; J. W. McGrath, C. B. Weir, Rev. Joseph Chafe, Mrs. Camra, Miss A. Jones, Mrs. Gaudin, C. B. Garlick, manager of the army and navy sweepstakes.

Miss M. Artineau, George Ehlers, Miss Atkins, Harold Moulton, John Kieley, Mr. and Mrs. S. Fowler, Mrs. W. White, Francis, Stephen and Frank Fowler, Jane Emberley, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Huy, K. W. Pelley, Miss Marjorie Bennett, C. S. Rawlins, H. Mott, P. Walsh, James Chipman, Mrs. A. Stack and Dorothy and William Stack.

The Rosalind was built in Clyde in 1911 and registers 2,399 tons. The steamer left New York last Saturday for St. Johns and Halifax, reaching her first port Monday.

FOUR MORE ARRESTED IN STRIKE DISORDER

Three Bristol Girls and Croydon Man Taken Into Custody

GET HEARING MONDAY

Three girls and a man have been placed under arrest here in connection with their activities in the strike of employees of the Blue Moon hosiery plant at Croydon.

All three were taken into custody on warrants issued at Doylestown and the charges are assault and battery and surety. Each of the four were given a preliminary hearing before Justice Laughlin and held in jail for a further hearing Monday morning before Justice Irvin M. James, at Doylestown.

Those under arrest are as follows: Paul Arnold, Croydon.

Helen Snyder, 802 Beaver street, Bristol.

Florence Noctie, 219 Franklin street, Bristol.

Rachel Ciancosti, 323 Grand avenue, Bristol.

The arrests were made by Chief Jones, and Miss Winifred McClefferty, 367 Buckley street, Bristol, is the prosecutor.

Miss McClefferty will appear against the four, it is said, at the hearing on Monday. The McClefferty home was visited by a group of the strikers on Wednesday night, and it is said that they threatened violence. The police arrived and Chief Jones warned the strikers that they must cease their disturbances here. He ordered them to get off the street and gave them five minutes in which to comply with his orders. He told the strikers and their friends that Bristol would not stand for any disorder and that if they were found in groups here that they would be taken into custody and charged with disorderly conduct. The Chief spoke in a very emphatic way and warned them of what to expect.

Emma Moeller, Croydon, was arrested on this occasion and fined $10 and costs. She was charged with breach of the peace, following the gathering at the McClefferty home.

Miss Moeller's case was heard before Justice Lynn and he likewise warned the strikers that there must not be any disturbance or molestation of peaceful Bristol citizens.

The McClefferty house was bombarded with stones early Thursday morning and several windows broken.

RETURNS HOME TODAY

Earle W. Smith, of Atlantic City, will return to his home today after spending the past three days with Mr. and Mrs. Lester D. Thorne, Jefferson avenue.

TROOP FIVE OF BRISTOL WINS FIRST HONORS IN DISTRICT SCOUTCRAFT MEET CONDUCTED HERE; MANY TROOPS TAKE PART IN CONTESTS

Bristol Troop 1 is Within Seven Points of Winners, with Troop 2 of This Borough, Third—Entire Lower Bucks District Represented

Bristol Troop No. 5 came first in the annual district Scoutcraft meet held in the Bristol High School last evening. Bristol No. 5 scored 25 points and was followed by Bristol No. 1 with 18 points. Bristol No. 2 took third place with 16 points.

The auditorium was filled with Scouts from the entire lower Bucks district. This area covers from Tullytown to Andalusia. Many newly organized troops were present to observe this end of the county's Scout champs. Bristol Troop No. 5, the newly organized St. Ann's troop, entered the exhibition drill and put on a very fine exhibition. Their maneuvers about the floor were so well carried out that at different times the applause of the onlookers drowned the orders of the boy leader, James LaSalle.

Scoring on a basis of five points for first place, three for second and one for third, Ralph Sheffer kept the tally. Mr. Antrobus, Scoutmaster of Morrisville No. 3, and Mr. Nichols, Scoutmaster of Morrisville No. 2, were the judges. The events were run off as follows:

Knot tying: Won by Leonard Dyer, Bristol No. 2; Stewart Rhodes, Bristol No. 5; and John Davies, Cornwells Heights No. 1. This event consisted of the tying of the carrick bend, Miller's knot, emergency rope halter, barrel hitch, diet loop and hitching tie.

Cooking contest: Won by Stewart Rhodes, Bristol No. 5; William Book, Croydon No. 2, and Walter Hendricks, Bristol No. 1. This event consisted of the boys frying an egg and two pieces of bacon. Their means of heat was supplied by canned heat which the boys brought with them.

Nature contest: Won by Donald DeLong, Bristol No. 2; Stewart Rhodes, Bristol No. 5; and George Knoll, Cornwells Heights No. 1. In this contest the boys were given a star chart from which they were to pick seven constellations.

Signaling event: Won by Elmer Bleakney, Robert Moore, Jack Orr and Stewart Rhodes, Bristol No. 5; Kenneth Dyer, Robert Connors, Walter Hendricks, Ed. Wallace, Bristol No. 1; Robert Cameron, Herbert Brambley, Albert Martin, and Irvin Brambley, Newportville No. 1. This event consisted of having four boys from each troop constitute a sending and a receiving station using a blinker light for sending the signal. An unknown

WILDCATS VICTORS OVER ELEPHANTS

McGinley and Rodgers Lead Teammates in Basketball Contest

FINAL SCORE 19 TO 15

(By T. M. Juno)

Led by "Nev" McGinley and "Hun" Rodgers, the Wildcats kept within striking distance of the first place Tigers by scoring a victory over the White Elephants last night on the Hibernians' floor. The final score was 19-15.

Rodgers bore the brunt of the Wildcats' scoring attack in the first half when he accounted for the entire eight points to give his team an 8-7 lead. McGinley took up where Rodgers left off for his second half duty. With the Elephants holding a 13-11 lead McGinley tallied from the middle of the floor, evening the count. He then gave his team a two-point lead by scoring from under the basket. Connors again deadlocked the score by hitting the net from the side. McGinley again scored and gave his mates another two-point lead which was kept until Gosline put the game away with a double-decker with only twenty seconds remaining to play.

Brady and Connors were the stars for the losers, although Lake was high scorer with eight points. McClefferty was a gleaming light on the defense of the Wildcats.

The line-up:

DOYLESTOWN PLANS BETTER MAIL SERVICE

More Trains Expected Over Reading When Electrification is Completed

BUSINESS MEN ACTIVE

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 6.—With the electrification of the Reading Railroad system nearing completion and with more frequent service promised this community there is a movement under way to secure more frequent and more efficient mail service for Doylestown.

Without the aid of a chamber of commerce or board of trade, it is planned by a group of business and professional men to circulate a petition through the Rotary, Kiwanis, Optimist and other clubs of the town, as well as all offices and people transacting business by mail for signatures to be forwarded to the proper United States mail authorities of this district located in Philadelphia.

With more frequent electric service it is the unanimous opinion of people interviewed here that Doylestown should have an outbound mail leaving town about noon and another at 9 or 10 o'clock at night to Philadelphia.

The co-operation of the local post office officials will be sought in obtaining better mail service. An advance survey of the improved electric train service that is promised, makes it possible for Doylestown to have better mail service.

Although Doylestown is but a short distance from Philadelphia, it is impossible for a business man receiving his mail here in the morning, to answer the letter and get it into a mail that will get back to Philadelphia the same day, unless speed records are shattered.

The usual morning business mail is sorted and read by the average business man by 9 o'clock in the morning. There is a morning mail out-bound 9 o'clock. It is the contention that a mail should leave Doylestown around the noon hour in order to reach Philadelphia central office for central delivery the same afternoon.

Likewise there is no mail out of Doylestown after 5.45 at night while a canvass of the community shows that a night mail, more than anything else is desired.

Numerous other improvements that will be suggested by the committee will be discussed with the district superintendent of mails, including better service between nearby Bucks county points.

At a hearing before Justice Nolan the two were held in $200 bail each for court.

New Car Badly Wrecked When It Crashes Into Tree

A new low priced sedan was totally wrecked late yesterday afternoon when it crashed head-on into a large tree in front of the Knights of Columbus home, Radcliffe and Mulberry streets.

The car is owned by Abram Yates, whose address is given as Bristol. The police have no record as to the driver of the machine.

After the crash the driver of the car is said to have gotten out, walked down the hill toward the river, threw something into the river and came back to the street, where he was picked up by a passing motorist and taken away from the scene.

The police were called and had the car removed from the street.

CONTINUE INJUNCTION IN COACH SUIT

Final Hearing to Be Held Against "Taxi" Drivers On March 23rd

BRISTOL PEOPLE HEARD

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 6.—Judge Calvin S. Boyer yesterday continued the temporary injunction until final hearing on March 23 in the case of the Delaware River Coach Company against Hugh McGuigan, Edward Rohrbach, Frank Hofner and Charles J. Rohrbach.

Several witnesses were called in the equity proceedings today. Minor J. Hill, manager of the Delaware River Coach Company, testified that the defendants have been illegally operating a taxicab and passenger transportation system between Philadelphia city line and Bristol along the Frankford-Bristol pike without a certificate from the Public Service Commission. This is along the route traversed by the complainant company, who hold a certificate from the Public Service Commission.

It was testified that the defendants solicit passengers along the highway and take "donations" or "tips" from the passengers instead of fares. Mr. Hill further testified that the receipts of his company decreased almost one-third during the unwarranted competition conducted by the defendants.

Ernest C. Anderson, of Croydon, employed by the bus company, testified that during an investigation that he made, McGuigan made twenty-seven trips in one week between the Torresdale section and Bristol, hauling seventy-nine people that he knew of personally.

Hugh Edward Vandine, of Bristol, testified that he rode in McGuigan's taxi on January 31 from Croydon to Bristol and paid him 35 cents, that McGuigan told him he had no stated charge.

Mrs. Catherine Fine, of Bristol, testified that she rode from Torresdale to Bristol for 25 cents with McGuigan. Sara Brown, of 481 West Hanover street, Trenton, told the Court that she rode on October 7 last year as a passenger in Charles Rohrbach's taxi, paying him 10 cents as fare.

It was further testified that several of the defendants had made statements that they would continue to haul passengers and that nobody could stop them as long as they took no stated fares.

Hugh Eastburn, counsel for the bus company, informed the Court today that two of the defendants had spoken to him yesterday at which time they assured him they would discontinue the operation of the taxi business.

SIR WALTER AND POTATOES

Why does not one of the iconic classic book makers start in on old Sir Walter Raleigh? It is rumored that there is nothing but rumor to support the famous legend of his gesture in covering a mud puddle with his only cloak; his interest in Virginia was purely that of an absentee landlord; his stories of his adventures in Guiana are largely yarns, and he has no right to his fame as the hero who introduced Ireland to potatoes.

The story that Raleigh had potatoes brought from Virginia and planted in his own garden in Ireland does not easily down, but there is said to be no basis for it. The potato did not grow in Virginia until more than a century after Raleigh's death although contemporary stories confused it with the openwork, or "ground nut," which still grows unnoticed in this country, and once formed a staple part of both Indian's and colonist's diet.

The Irish potato came to Europe from the west coast of South America, and it reached Virginia and New England from Ireland. The Spaniards introduced it to Europe; Italians and even Viennese knew it before it was ever planted in Irish soil; but by 1663, a year of dearth in the British Isles, it was already an important food source in Ireland.

The Electors of Prussia forced their subjects to grow potatoes against their will; Frederick the Great sent dragons out to encourage the peasants in potato culture; but it was the famine of the Seven Years' war which finally made potatoes popular in Germany, and it was a French prisoner in Germany during that war, Antoine Auguste Parmentier, who taught France to like the strange vegetable and gave to potato soup the name which appears on French menu cards today. So far as is known the first white potatoes to reach North America came to Londonderry, N. H., with Scotch-Irish immigrants in 1719, and they gradually made their way southward to Virginia.

Yes, it is high time the biographers get busy on poor old Sir Walter Raleigh.

AUTOMOBILE COURTESY

Courtesy is a word that seems to have been completely eliminated from the lexicon of the auto driver. Let the most meek of men get at a wheel and they become arrogant devils, determined to "have their rights" whatever the consequences. It is motoritis in its most acute form.

Let a dog or a rabbit cross the road and the driver will instinctively step on the brake, but if a human being hoves in sight he will press the horn button and step on the gas.

Here is an aspect of human nature that never manifested itself so forcibly before the day of the gas buggy. It is an interesting one, nevertheless.

The good may die young, but that fact is not disturbing the mortality tables.

What many persons need is currency so elastic that it will stretch from one pay day to another.

"MURDER AT EAGLE'S NEST" By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

The murder of Baroness von Wiese at Eagle's Nest stirred the town of Kingcliffe. Walter Vance, Assistant Chief-of-Police, is in charge of the investigation, aided by his fiancée, "Bim" Martin, young newspaper reporter. A note, written by the Baroness, is found near the body. Bim recalls seeing the Baroness slip the butler a piece of paper, which he denies. Suspicion is cast on Mary Frost, whose husband, Ted, had flirted with the Baroness. Mary's shawl is found wrapped around the body. Mary claims she was unable to locate the shawl and left with Ted. It develops she returned later for the shawl. Complications arise when it is learned that Laura Allan had borrowed the shawl. Emily Hardy's maid heard the Baroness quarrel with her maid. Bim wonders about the wounds on the head and arm of the Baroness' maid. The jewels of the Baroness have been stolen. Laura says she saw Mary entering the garden wearing her shawl. Bim finds a stone from a man's ring on the Summer house path. Laura denies wearing the shawl.

CHAPTER XIV.

"LIES!" thought Bim wildly. "Lies! Lies! What are they all trying to cover up? They couldn't all have done the murder; they couldn't all know who did it. Yet they've all got some thing they don't want known."

Something they want to make seem different. What's happened here is going to change things. It's going to dig into secret places in all their lives and then those places won't be secret any more. We'll all know things we've no right to know; things that will probably make us hate each other. Then what will happen?

She watched Laura fling her self into her long sports coat and drive furiously away; she watched Reynolds and Walter and Em move off to the library and still she lingered in the morning sunshine, pondering the lies she had heard.

Nothing but Lies

First there was the butler's lie last night about a robbery; a lie in which the maid, Jane, concurred after he had put the story in her mouth.

Then Mary hadn't told the truth the morning she had said that she and Ted went directly home and remained there, whereas first Imogene and now Laura Allan declared they had seen her here an hour later.

Then either Imogene or Jane had lied about the quarrel in the Baroness' dressing room and now Laura Allan had lied about wearing Mary Frost's shawl. For surely Imogene would have no object in telling that story if it were not true. Lies—lies—and why?

Because, Bim concluded, there had been more going on in the Pine Hill crowd than met the eye—more than she suspected—more, no doubt, than anyone suspected.

With a sensation of things crashing all about her, Bim wondered if it were her illusions falling—she stroiled thoughtfully around to the west wing and paused at the edge of the ravine, gazing down the vine-covered rocks. Then she wandered around the other way, lingering on the southern terrace and finally striking out through the grounds toward the wall at the back of Eagle's Nest.

Em had telephoned the Trents, who had promised to stop by on their way to the village, where they had made an engagement for luncheon; now, while they waited, Walter and Reynolds would be in the library going over the evidence, or lack of it, gathered so far—a tedious process in which Bim had no wish to share.

Giving the Summer house a wide berth, she made her way up the hill and finally came to a stile, up which she climbed to settle herself on the wall.

On the other side of the wall was a narrow, private road, running along the south-western end of the estate. The road had been chopped out of the woods at great trouble and expense and covered with loose pebbles, which sprinkled trees and shrubbery and the long grasses growing all about with dust as fine and white as flour. Bim stared at the road and the whitened verdure and gave herself up to thoughts of the confusion likely to be stirred in Kingcliffe by the chance visit of the Baroness—the unknown woman, whose life had touched Kingcliffe lives so briefly and with what promise to be such disastrous effects before it was snuffed out by a bullet.

An Unfrequented Path

Musing thus, Bim nevertheless was sufficiently alert to wonder why at the tracks in the white dust of the road. She had supposed that nothing came on this road excepting the light wagon which the gardener, Terrance O'Toole, drove behind a fat old dobbie back and forth between Lowland Drive and the ravine.

Yet the tire tracks were distinct where the dust had been pressed down beneath the weight of a car and there were two sets of them, showing that the car had run as far as the stile and then backed away. Those which would have been made by the left rear and the right front wheels showed smooth places where the rubber, no doubt, was worn; the left front tire had been new, for the prints it left were deep and sharp while unmarked depression, attested to the ancient state of the right tire.

While Bim was speculating on the identity of a driver so foolhardy as to take this steep, bumpy road, she heard a crackle in the grounds at her back, and presently turned to see the little gardener, with scythe over his shoulder, his wiry, crooked little legs clambering up the hill.

"You look like Father Time," she called. "Whither away, Terrance?"

"I do be workin' in the woods the day, cuttin' them damned locusts, savin' your presence. And how's the mur-der gettin' on, Miss Bimmy?"

"Not so good, I'm afraid. People forget things they ought to remember, and they remember things that don't count, and there you are. I don't suppose," she asked, hopefully, "You've thought of anything that slipped your mind this morning?"

The old fellow let his scythe fall to the stile with a clatter as he dropped himself on the lower step, and removing an old straw hat, mopped his head and neck with the bandana.

"I dunno's I have, Miss," he replied, finally. "Whist, now, I said nothin' of me little walk ar-round to the lad, I'm thinkin', not that I was for-gergettin', so to speak."

"You took a walk last night, Terrance?" Bim tried to keep excitement out of her tone.

"I did that, Miss Bimmy, what with Maggie's coffee and the wakefulness on me. Just a bit of a stroll on the road here where it's quiet-like of an evenin'."

"See anyone up here?"

"Not a soul. 'Twas late and folks had gone home and to bed—most folks anyways."

"Probably someone was up," Bim suggested, "if you'd known where to look for them."

"They was that," Terrance agreed, winking slyly. "Not that it's for the likes of me to be tellin' ye who."

Tactful Words

The old fellow was enjoying himself, Bim saw. He wished to be coaxed and she set about this with a slyness which matched his own.

"You'll tell me, though, won't you? I'm dying to hear. I'll bet—well, I'll bet it was Bunny Baird!" She fastened on Baird at random but saw that she had hit the mark.

One mild blue eye closed as the little man nodded. "Twas that one, Miss Bimmy. 'Thinks I is a night for a r-ramble and I'll betake meself up the hill, and sure enough up the hill I goes till I comes to a light. And there's my fine artist's place with his shad-der on the blind." He screwed up his face craftily. "Nor that ain't all neither."

"Terrance O'Toole if you don't tell me the rest this minute!"

"Well, then, they's another shadder on the blind along of me fine art and it's a lady's shadder."

"No!" Bim pretended to be overcome as the mild blue eyes watched the effect upon her of this news. "Did you see who the lady was?"

"I did not," regretfully.

"That's too bad, Terrance. What time did you say this was?"

"I didn't say, Miss Bimmy, but 'twas somewhere near two."

"Well! Well, thanks for the story, Terrance. It's sure a good one."

"It is that." He shouldered his scythe and scrambled away in the woods while Bim tried to guess the identity of the woman who visits Bunny Baird in his bungalow at two o'clock. Laura Allan? But Laura had said she was home and asleep at two o'clock. Besides I didn't sound like the aloof and conservative Laura Allan. Who ever it was would deny it; that much was certain.

With a tired little sigh, Bim started back down the hill and arrived at the mansion in time to see a dilapidated old car rattle up the drive and Bob and Millicent Trer get out.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Local Dealer Joins Effort To Reduce Driving Cost

To make America's 25,000,000 automobiles run better, look better and give greater satisfaction to their owners, is the purpose of the national "Care Will Save Your Car" campaign which has been brought to Bristol by Charles Nadler, automobile service and accessories. This great movement is being sponsored by the Motor and Equipment Association, an organization composed of the leading manufacturers and distributors of parts and accessories.

"Too many drivers are careless about permitting their cars to get into a rundown condition," explained Mr. Nadler in announcing the affiliation of his service station with this new idea in the automotive field. "It is a national turning to preventive maintenance and by preventive maintenance, we mean keeping an automobile in first-class condition at all times by subjecting it to thorough inspections at regular intervals. It's locking the stall before the horse is stolen, not afterwards."

acquiring the creek frontage has been approximately estimated at $9,000. Dam construction might involve half as much more.

A high bridge bisecting the lake would utterly spoil the natural setting, supporters of the beautification movement said. They fear uncertainty in official circles at Doylestown as to the purpose of the State Highway Department may hold up the parkway improvement. Owners are asking from $50 to $100 per acre for creek frontage in the options which have been obtained by the Sellersville Kiwanis-Board of Trade committee.

Not all soldier bonus loans will be wasted, one World War veteran declared yesterday as he walked in the office of the Bucks county marriage license bureau in the Court House at street, Philadelphia, who earlier in the day had received a bonus loan check for $600.

"We have been waiting some time for this and now we can get married," was Nelson C. Torade, thirty-one, a Torade informed Deputy Clerk Jacob

Shelly, who issued him a license to wed Mary Rose Kelley, 23, of Morrisville. "When we learned that I could borrow some money on my government certificate, Mary and I decided to get married."

The marriage was performed by the Rev. George M. Whitenack, Jr., in the Presbyterian Manse.

Another couple married yesterday was Charles A. Hess, twenty-two, of 4036 North Marshall street, Philadelphia, and Amelia R. Vare, twenty-one, of 2086 Brady street, Philadelphia. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Reese Scott, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Doylestown.

Thomas V. Gaffney, 22, of 105 North Troy avenue, Atlantic City, and Elizabeth M. Croderly, twenty-one, of 227 North Morris avenue, Atlantic City, were granted a marriage license at the county seat yesterday.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By NANCY LEE

DEAR NANCY LEE: We are two girls who always read your column with great interest and now we are coming to you with our troubles. We are deeply in love with two blond fellows, both in college. They don't come home very often but still they want us to be true to them. Should we or not? When at home they try that "collegiate cave-man stuff." What shall we do? When we go on double dates, they monopolize the conversation, talk about music in which we are not interested. We know this is not polite, but please do not tell us to give them up because we love them dearly, and losing them would break our hearts.

BRIDGET AND SAL.

BRIDGET AND SAL: So it would break your hearts to lose your young man, but it would be too much trouble to try and take an interest in their hobbies. Well, well, well. That doesn't sound as if the affair was going to be a very successful one, for the young man will sooner or later seek more congenial companionship. For a mutual interest and hobby often flowers into real affection. Of course, we don't say that the young men should monopolize the conversation with talk about their own hobby, but a sympathetic interest would no doubt foster them and make them happy. The woman who is smart enough to cultivate an interest in a man's hobbies and work is generally the woman who is smart enough to deal with cave-man tactics. Think it over.

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I am a girl in my late teens. I am in love with a boy. The last time I was with him he acted like he was angry at me. He is the only one I care for. Please tell me how to win his friendship back.

He has told me he really loved me.

BOOTS.

BOOTS: The only thing to do is to ask the young man just what the trouble seems to be. If he is merely of the whimsical type, who really hasn't any excuse or reason for his behavior, I would advise you to find other friends, because people of this type are an awful trial.

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I have been going with a certain boy—"R. J."—for about five months. I went with another boy—"D."—for about three months before jealousy separated us. Now, although I love the boy I am going with, I still long to go with "D."

Should I quit "R. J." and try to win back "D."? Friendship or continue going with "R. J."?

Sometimes, when I'm with "R. J." he seems so distant. What can I do to change his attitude?

LONESOME L.

LONESOME L.: If the girl "R. J." is escorting is thinking about somebody else, I don't wonder that "R. J." seems distant. If you are wondering about the attitude of the boy you are with, why should you worry about your old friend? It looks as though you want the friendship of both. You had better make up your mind, or you won't be cheating your friend, you will be cheating yourself.

SUICIDE? MURDER? MIRACLE?

PARALYZED from that horrible accident! Never to walk again—I still burned with love for Olga—my sweet, young wife. And yet I was unable to appease that glow of hope in her eyes—hope that blazed with desire—the day she met Del Raignon—unscrupulous matinee idol.

Helpless, I watched him play on her loving, innocent nature—biding his time till Olga no longer could resist him. Now I suffered—prayed for her—ragged with jealousy—and dropped to the drugs of despair.

That night—my revolver. "Good-bye, angel-heart," I whispered and—THEN! Out on the lawn—I saw Raignon—take her—my wife—in his arms. "I can't let her live in that disgrace," I cried. Slowly I raised my revolver—carefully I took aim—and . . .

What did John do? In that awful climax, did he kill Olga to save her from disgrace with Raignon? Or did he murder that cad—an act which would blacken him forever in the eyes of his wife—of society—of God?

What mighty miracle could have come to solve this pitiful tangle of helpless human destinies? You must read for yourself BECAUSE I LOVED MY WIFE—the true, heart-rending story of a man who wheeled his way through hell in an invalid's chair—and what he finally found at the very brink of oblivion.

Read BECAUSE I LOVED MY WIFE and nearly a score of other astounding real-life stories, including titles such as "HIS FAMILY LOVE," "I MARRIED FOR MY FAMILY'S SAKE" and "IT'S SO EASY TO BELIEVE EVIL"—all in April TRUE STORY MAGAZINE. Get your copy—read it today!

ARGUE EFFECTS OF NEW BALL ON GAME

By Les Conklin
N. S. Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Mar. 6.—First reports emanating from the major league training camps reveal a decided difference of opinion among ball players as to the probable effect of the new baseball on the game.

The so-called "small ball" to be used in the National League this year has a thicker leather cover and the thread is of a thicker strand. The ball is not put through the rolling and finishing process to countersink the stitches.

The seams on the American League ball also are raised but the cover is the same as that used on the jack-rabbit ball in previous years.

Most observers agree that the new sphere will carry as far as the lively ball if hit squarely, but admit that the raised seams will enable the pitchers to put more "stuff" on the ball. In other words, home runs probably will be just as spectacular as ever this season, but fewer in number.

It is generally admitted that the real sluggers of the game will continue to clout impressive home runs, but that the ordinary hitters will be the ones whose batting averages will suffer. Grounders that used to hop crazily past the infielders, will be easier to handle this year, it is believed.

"I think the ball will help a young pitcher's control," reports Clarence Mitchell, veteran spitball pitcher of the New York Giants. "The raised stitching will create more air resistance which will make for sharper-breaking curves."

Tom Clarke, coach of the Giants, pointed out that the raised seams will enable infielders to grip the ball more firmly and predicted that there will be fewer wild throws. He also declared that unless the ball were hit flush on the leather and not on the stitches, there will be fewer lightning drives too hot for infielders to handle.

Chief Bender, former world series hero, who is now a battery coach with the Giants, thinks that the psychological effect of the new sphere will be helpful to pitchers. He points out that if a hurler firmly believes he can pitch more effectively, his confidence will enable him to do better work even though there actually is no great change in the ball.

Bender predicted that the raised seams would cause sores and blisters on the fingers of a hurler's pitching hand until the boxmen learn to grip the ball in the correct manner.

Most of the pitchers were non-committal regarding the new horsehide. As yet they are not trying to curve the ball, but are merely lobbing pitches up to the plate. When they start to bear down, it will be demonstrated whether or not they are going to be able to check the epidemic of heavy hitting which has become the feature of the national pastime.

Children Are Annoying In Exactly 2,124 Ways

—So a Recent "Survey" Informs Us.

Winifred Black Writes About the Test, in Which Parents Tabulated the Numerous Ways Their Offspring vexed Them—and the "Discovery."

By WINIFRED BLACK

TALK about Einstein and his discoveries—
Dr. Mandel Sherman, director of the Child Research Center, Washington, D. C., is the real Christopher Columbus when it comes to discoveries—if you ask me.

Dr. Sherman announces that he has discovered that there are 2,124 ways in which children annoy their parents.

Jr. Sherman found all this out by making a survey.

He asked a certain number of parents to keep notebooks around with them, and kept a record each day of the week.

Talk about system. Wouldn't you like to have a parent with a notebook in his hand? So interesting, so human, so kindly, so humorous, so tolerant, and so common-sense—the whole astonishing idea.

We may think we know a little something about parents and a little more perhaps about children ourselves—we ordinary, everyday human beings who don't have to lug a notebook around to see what we see, when we want to see it.

To be sure we've every one of us had parents of our own, and a whole lot of us have had and still have children—not to mention the fact that we've all been children ourselves, sometime or other.

But did we make a survey and set down questions and answers, and have an alphabetical file and make reports and everything.

Not so it would worry you any to think about it. And how can you expect to know things unless you make a "survey?"

And what do you think the parents with the notebooks set down in those same books with so much care and precision?

It's interesting to know. Some of the parents were annoyed because their children were too slow, and others were annoyed because their children were entirely too quick, too sharp, too sudden about things.

Well, well, think of that. We never heard of such a thing before did we—not until the survey was made?

Of course when little Johnny couldn't go out the door without slamming it, and it sounded like a peal of thunder—we knew it made us jump.

And we usually found some way to hint to Johnny that door slamming was not exactly what you might call "clubby."

And when little Willie persisted in leaving the door open—when "he" went out we spoke to Willie about it, and said things about being raised in a barn, or words to that effect, and Willie seemed to have no trouble in realizing that yawning doors were somehow or other a bit of an annoyance—but dear me what a relief it is to have a survey about it.

It makes us all feel so accurate and scientific, and well informed, don't you know.

But wouldn't you love to provide Willie and Johnny with notebooks, and ask them to set down the various ways in which parents annoy children?

Interesting reading, for the parents—eh what?

Indoor Track Marvels

By HARDIN BURNLEY

George SPITZ

BRILLIANT YOUNG N.Y.U. HIGH-JUMP SENSATION WHOSE SUDDEN RISE TO STARDOM ASTOUNDED TRACK FANS!

SPORT BUG.

A TRACK GENIUS IN THE MAKING!

WHILE highly touted foreign athletes have failed to click conspicuously in America during the current indoor season, several native standbys and some dazzling newcomers have been the Winter's sporting headlines. First and perhaps foremost, is George Spitz, 18-year-old New York University freshman, who in his first metropolitan appearance at the Millrose games did a high jump of 6 feet, 7 inches, only an inch and a quarter less than the world's record set in 1924 by Harold Osborn, the veteran, yet still wonderful, decathlon champion.

Osborn, incidentally, was second to Spitz in that Millrose event, doing a splendid 6-foot-6—a remarkable feat for one who is now in his tenth year of intensive athletic competition. In some respects, Osborn looms as one of the greatest all-round athletes of all time. He looks like and is a professor at Illinois where he started at track and field a decade ago. Seven years ago, he won the 10-event contests at the 1924 Olympics. Last January he pressed the versatile Barney Berlinger of Penn to the limit when the latter won the Norwegian Turn Society's pentathlon at Brooklyn, N. Y.

An incident occurred there indicative of Osborn's athletic spirit. He and Berlinger tied at 6-foot-1 in the high jump. He asked and obtained permission to keep on trying, later efforts not to count in the score. The bar was first set at 6-2, then 3, then 4, then 5 and finally 6-6. Osborn cleared each with mastery skill. Besides that
